Quonset-Type Huts Meet Storage Needs 'Little Business' Answers Challenge in Grain Belt

Called upon by the department of agriculture to perform a modern miracle, "little business" in 10 midwestern states is tackling one of the biggest jobs of its kind ever undertaken anywhere in peacetime.

Its Herculean assignment is the site preparation and erection of 2,300 steel buildings—each 32x96 feet or larger—at 670 widely separated locations.

The task arose with the grain belt's acute need for space in which to store the record-breaking carryover of 1948's corn crop. In line with the trend toward economical "horizontal" grain storage, the department ordered Quonset buildings for a large part of the necessary new facilities. These archroofed steel units now are mushrooming up beside highways and railroads near farm centers through the efforts of local businesses and labor, rather than the work of transient crews employed by a few big and distant contracting firms.

Grain being loaded into Quonset-1 its for CCC storage near Paul ing, Ohio.

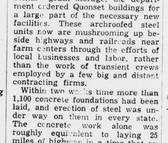
Within two weeks time more than 1,100 concrete foundations had been laid, and erection of steel was under way on them in every state. The concrete work alone was roughly equivalent to laying 25 miles of highway in a time that an average road-making crew would require to put down one.

Sweat Down Costs



Sweat down your production costs if you want to maintain profits in these days of declining farm prices. One way to sweat down those costs is to increase your crop yields per acre. More bushels of corn and grain per acre, more pounds of meat, milk, dairy products and poultry mean lower production costs per unit. On such a basis you can make a profit even if prices slacken further.

You can get those higher yields and lower costs with good soil management. Good soil management means giving your soil a fair deal. It means supplying the soil a well-balanced ration of plant foods, so crops will be well nourished. It means building up instead of breaking down soil structure and tilth. It means "recharging" the land with soil-enriching crops at regular intervals, instead of growing soil-draining row crops year after year on the same land.

Dangers of Butchering At Home are Outlined

Home butchering is profitable on the farm and many rural families are replenishing their lockers, jars and pantries.

But, unless undue caution is used, home butchering can be dangerous.

Equipment, too, should be used with care. All knives should be kept in a suitable place when not in use. Hoisting equipment should be checked. A tamper should be used to force meat into the grinder.

Attention to Details Pays Off for Hog Farms

Attention to details is the biggest reason why some hog farms earned $2,000 more than some others during the past year.

F. J. Reiss, farm management specialist in the Illinois college of agriculture, said that 128 high income hog farms averaged $10,200 earnings from swine last year, while 161 less-efficient farms took in only $8,000. Extra care at farrowing, control of parasites, helped

Druids First to Use "Magic" of Mistletoe

The greens which are used for Christmas decorations found their way into early festivities because of certain virtues attributed to them by the ancients, and many of them which adorned pagan seasonal rites were later taken over to grace the ceremonies and celebrations of Christmas Day.

In both England and America, the holly and the mistletoe are associated with Christmas as invariably as are the plum pudding and Christmas tree.

It was the Druids who first used the mistletoe. "Heal all" was their name for it. The plant was supposed to have curative virtues, and gradually they assigned to it all manner of magic powers.

Their priests, each year around the time when we now celebrate Christmas, would have high platforms built and the sacred oak trees which, in a manner of speaking, were "heals" to the mistletoe. Robed in ceremonial vestments of white, they ascended these platforms, and with golden sickles especially made for the solemn occasion they cut away the mistletoe.

The Saxons also prized it and it was they who gave to it the name of mistletoe.

Eventually the green came to be regarded as a symbol of peace. Opposing warriors who met near it would call a truce, and it was customary to hang it over the entrance doors so that they who entered might be assured of friendship.

Hunting season now on.

IN MEMORIAM
In memory of my Mother, Mrs. B. H. Martin:
As the Christmas Season draws near my heart is sad. No mother to go to see on Christmas Day.
Oh, how we miss her dear sweet smile. She always met us at the door with a smile. I will never forget the morning she left us. It was hard to see you take your last breath. I miss you, dear Mother, every day. No one can fill your vacant chair. Home is sad without you. But God loved you best. He took you home to rest.
—Sadly missed by your daughter,
Mrs. B. Harding.

IN MEMORY
In memory of a friend and former Pastor, the Rev. William R. Reed, who departed this life one year ago, Monday, Dec. 12, 1948.
Today I am thinking of someone,
Who was so kind and true;
Whose smile was as dear as the sunshine:
My Pastor, that someone, was you.
God's way is right, it's never wrong.
He gives us strength to carry on.
—A friend, Mary I. Babcock.

CARD OF THANKS
We wish to thank our many friends and relatives for their kind expressions of love and sympathy they showed us during the death of our wife and mother, Mrs. Leonard W. Carter.
—Husband. Daughters and Sons.

In Loving Memory of my husband and our daddy, Bennie Walker Gallier, who died 19 years ago today, Dec. 5, 1930.
Nineteen years have passed dear Husband and Daddy since you were called away. How we do remember that sad day.
Suffered much, your mourned not. We watched you day by day. We cried and prayed that your dear life would not be taken away.
—Sadly missed by
Wife and Children.

Pork Lovers Use Survey By College to Laud Swine

LINCOLN, NEB. — Results of North Carolina state college tests to prove their contention that the swine is the cleanest, smartest, most respectable animal on the farm, are being quoted hereabouts by pork lovers.

Compared to the chimpanzee, brightest of the ape family, the porker was a whiz at IQ tests, according to his supporters. He learned to match dogs in hunting, it was claimed, and only frustrated vanity and commonsense drove him to the hog wallow.

Pigs have no sweat glands, it was explained, and the only way for them to cool off is to plunge into the wallow. No other means of cleanliness is provided.

Snide references to a "hoggish appetite," or to the animal's habit of rooting in the soil draw instant defense from the pigs' friends. Can the hog help it if nature endowed him with one of the fastest growing bodies in the animal world? And it takes food to grow, they say.

As for rooting, the experts describe it as a good, clean habit and an economical way of getting essential minerals.

If Junior wants a pet, try a pig, according to these enthusiasts. They argue a porker makes a devoted pet, can be housebroken easily, and has one of the best constitutions for testing baby foods.

Fire College Lists Students Of Many Lands

NEW YORK—There is no campus, no athletic teams, no college songs, but the fire college here has attracted students from all over the world.

The college was set up in 1912 by the New York city fire department. There are seven schools in the college of rookies, experienced firemen and officers.

There are thousands of fire buffs who would gladly pass up a three-alarm fire to attend one of the schools. But this courtesy, which may be extended to outsiders only by the fire commissioners, usually is extended only to fire chiefs of other countries and cities.

These fire chiefs, who come from every state in the nation, as well as England, Belgium, Brazil, Finland and the British West Indies, are put through officer's school. They go to class once a week for 14 weeks. At the same time they are assigned to a busy firehouse and roll with the company to get practical experience.

Recalls Norwegian

Deputy Chief Edward Conway, of staff and operations, who is in charge of the college, recalls a visiting chief from Norway:

"He was a big, fine looking chap. He wanted to cram everything he could in his short stay. So he spent his days at the college and his nights with a midtown engine company.

"He walked into my office a week later, and I didn't recognize him. He looked like he hadn't slept for a month. He'd been busy rolling to one fire after another. The only thing he said to me was, 'I never heard so many alarm bells in my life.'"

Chief Conway then told of a South American fire chief's short semester:

"This fellow was really kept busy. He rolled to the Empire State building the day a plane crashed into it. Right after that he had two ship fires. This was in addition to the routine runs. He told me he rolled on fires he never knew existed."

Taught Newest Techniques

Thirty to 40 newly appointed lieutenants attend a session of officers school. They are taught every conceivable way of scientifically controlling a fire. Besides, they must become familiar with the intricate high pressure water mains under the street.

About once a year an entire fire company is ordered to the company school. Other firemen are assigned to its quarters for the day. Acting as a unit, the company is put through 24 basic evolutions in fire fighting. The members are timed and rated accordingly. Firemen receiving low ratings are recalled later for further review.

TRIBUTE TO MISS SAVEDGE

We, the principals and teachers in the Negro Schools of Appomattox Co., wish to express our deepest sympathy and profound regret in the passing of Miss Mary Savedge.

Because of her pleasant smile, her generous heart and friendly disposition, we considered her our friend and co-worker. Because of her experience, training, and ability we accepted her as an educator of notable worth. We appreciated the kindly help she so often, and so willingly, extended to us.

And now all of a sudden the curtain falls and hides her from our view—but, she moves on into a larger and brighter field of usefulness —Leaving us to share with many others, pleasant memories which will never pass away.
